Douglas Plans to Deduct Unpaid Loans From Farm Bounties

WASHINGTON — Budget Director Lewis Douglas, F. D. R.'s irrepressible super-economizer, is at it again.

This time it is the farmers he is after. In the next few months between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 is due to be paid them by the government as bounties in return for cutting crop production. Douglas has it all figured out how the Treasury can save a large part of this money.

As a result of devastation by floods and drought in recent years, the government has loaned millions of dollars for seed and feed. It is estimated that $130,000,000 of these debts still are unpaid, simply because farmers haven't had the money.

But now, with the government about to send them checks, Douglas proposes first to deduct what is owing the Treasury.

This ma e counting-house practice, but poor recovery economics. The whole purpose of the bounty plan is to put purchasing power in the empty hands of the farmers and the farm relief administrators are up in arms over the proposal. They warn that it is economic stupidity plus political dynamite.

Attorney General Cummings has been asked for a legal opinion, but it is a safe bet that the bounty payments will be made in full.

Used to Them

Last week the State Department made a genuine gesture to Haiti. It offered to take the Marines out by October. This was three years ahead of treaty schedule.

Paeons of praise and acclaim were expected.

But instead, the Haitians said: "No. We want the Marines to stay."

No explanation of this was given, but the State Department could guess the reasons: One, the Marines spend most of their pay checks in Haiti; two, President Vincent is worried about the security of his office and appreciates the steadying influence of Marine Corps proximity.

But despite this, the State Department has determined to take out the Marines about January 1.

Big Oaks

The old axiom that "big oaks out of little acorns grow" is too true regarding the origin of Roosevelt's spectacular appeal for a national moratorium on labor disputes.

It all started in Fayette-co, Pennsylvania, bloody battle-ground of fierce labor wars. Gunmen-guards of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, a subsidiary of the Morgan-controlled United States Steel Corporation, opened fire on unarmed miners, wounding nine, killing one.

The next day General Hugh Johnson flew up to Harrisburg to address Pennsylvania manufacturers about the NRA. Governor Pinchot met him, warned that the murderous attack was stirring miners to fever heat, that unless peace was restored a general tie-up of the entire soft coal region would result.

The fast-thinking, one-time cavalry commander did not have to be told twice what such a development would do to the President's recovery program.

Johnson figured that with American labor in its present high-spirited, hopeful state, a great demonstration was almost certain to spread like wild-fire. On the strictly industrial side Johnson, a genius in economic statistics, knew that soft coal reserves were at a low ebb; that a cessation of mining operations would cripple reviving manufacturing operations, hamstring the recovery effort.

So Johnson roared into action. Learning that Thomas Moses, President of the Frick Company, was enroute by plane to Harrisburg he waited for him at the airport. Moses balked at coming to Washington, said he had local appointments to keep.

"The hell with those engagements!" Johnson replied. "They can wait." Moses still objected.

Mr. Dye is district manager of the office located in the Wyandotte building, Columbus.

The Herald received a report from Columbus, Thursday, that the appointment had already been made but when Mr. Pickens was reached on telephone in Mr. Dye's office he denied that he had actually been appointed but said he had been recommended by Congressman Mell G. Underwood and that he would know definitely tonight whether or not he would receive the post.

QUIT AS CLERK?

Appointment to the job, which is an important one and on which the salary has not yet been announced, will mean that Pickens will resign as clerk of courts. He is now on his second term as clerk. The chief counsel's job is a full-time one.

The position as Pickaway-co home loan attorney is still open, C. A. Leist, chairman of the Democratic executive committee, disclosed Thursday but it is expected to be filled in a short time.

Mr. Pickens is president of the Ohio Clerk of Courts association and is district deputy grand exalted ruler of the B. P. O. Elks lodge.

PITTMAN SEES ARMED ACTION

Senator Says United States Must Protect Own In Cuban Disorder.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Armed intervention in Cuba by United States battleships and marines was forecast today by Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, unless President Roosevelt decides to ignore the Platt amendments.

Senator Pittman's statement was made on his arrival here aboard the liner Manhattan from London, where he was a delegate to the world economic conference.

The Senator asserted an immediate decision must be made and held that only two courses were open to the United States.

"The United States," he said, "will have to intervene if we carry out the policies laid down in the Platt amendment. Intervention by other governments will come if the amendment's policies are denounced."

The Platt amendment provides for protection of foreign citizens in Cuba, as well as Americans, by American troops if disorders make it necessary.

Bureau To Enforce Dry Laws Ceases To Exist

Thirteen Years of Hectic Battle as Independent Unit Now Concluded; Once is Absorbed in Department of Justice Under Cummings; Dalrymple Automatically Loses Job.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Thirteen years of bloody and hectic enforcement of the prohibition law by a separate bureau of the government came to an end today.

The prohibition bureau expired.

Many felt that real enforcement of the Volstead act went by the board at the same time.

An executive order created the division of investigation of the department of justice. This division absorbed the prohibition, investigation and identification bureaus.

Thirteen hundred employes of the prohibition bureau were furloughed July 1, while a considerable additional number will be dropped within a few days. It was expected that not more than 2,000 of the total personnel of 4,000 would be retained. Half of those to remain in the justice department will be prohibition enforcement agents.

FORCE NEGLIGIBLE

Officials said that Attorney General Cummings would continue to direct his skeleton force of agents against the liquor traffic, but admitted that under the new lineup the government is powerless to cope with the illicit business. Even with the larger force the bootleggers plied a tremendous and profitable business. What they can do under the smaller force can be left to the imagination.

While the liberalization of the medicinal liquor regulations promised some relief to enforcement agents, the supply of legitimate whiskey is low and prices are increasing. At the same time bootleggers generally are cutting prices and getting all the business possible before repeal.

Assistant Attorney General William Stanley went to Connecticut to confer with Cummings, who is there on a vacation. It was understood the new prohibition set-up was put before Cummings for approval.

At the office of John S. Hurley, assistant head of the division of investigation, in charge of prohibition enforcement, it was stated that several days would elapse before the new organization would be perfected.

JOHNSON HITS VIOLATION OF NRA POLICIES

Retailers Who Promised Not to Reduce Store Hours Are Cited

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Liberalized agreements authorized by Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, are speeding the drive to enroll every business and industry under a code. Today, at the same time, the entire business world had before it a stern warning not to violate these easy agreements.

Formation of a policy board to recommend easements in the terms of the President's blanket code, so that firms might readily adapt their operations to conform to its aims, has drawn in numerous additional concerns.

It has become apparent that the administrator is subordinating proceedings on permanent codes in favor of speedier and less complicated modified agreements permitted under the President's blanket appeal.

Warning that retailers' organizations had promised not to curtail store hours below 52 per week, or in case a store already operated on a shorter schedule, not to reduce its hours at all, Johnson pointed out that the whole aim of the agreement was to spread employment, and assure a reasonable wage.

NEED WORKERS

"There can be no misunderstanding about that," he said. "It is evident that the longer a store remains open and the shorter number of hours every employee works, the greater will be the number of workers needed."

He cited clauses in the agreement promising "not to use any subterfuge to frustrate the spirit and intent of the agreement.

"No one signing such an agreement could conceivably set about staggering employee hours, enforcing rest periods and increas-

FIRE STRIKES HEFFNER MILL

Loss of $500 Reported By Harry Heffner; Williamsport Firemen Aid.

Quick work of the Williamsport fire department helped avert probable ruin for the Heffner Grain Co., Williamsport, about 4:30 p. m. Wednesday, when a fire started in a supply of charcoal in the north warehouse adjoining the elevator, inflicting about $500 damage.

The fire department hurried to the elevator and quickly put out the flames. The black dust emanating from the broken charcoal sacks hampered the firemen in extinguishing the blaze. Boards were pried off from the inside of the building in order to get the hose on the flames.

Harry Heffner, this city, and workmen at the elevator reported that they detected smoke as early as 2 p. m. and made several inspections of the plant but were unable to locate any fire. The blaze was discovered when smoke began to pour out along the eaves of the warehouse roof.

Spontaneous combustion was given as the cause of the fire. Many sacks of charcoal and feed were ruined. The loss is covered by insurance.

STRIKERS JAILED

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Fifty two milk strikers and their sympathizers were taken into custody by state troopers today in an outbreak at Deruyter, about 40 miles southwest of here, where non-strikers were delivering milk to a plant.

Several hundred strikers had assembled near the plant when four trucks, loaded with milk, came up the highway. The trucks were halted and an attempt made to dump the milk.

State troopers were summoned. They waded into the crowd and a hand-to-hand battle ensued. A number of farmers and troopers were bruised in the fight but none seriously injured.

Miss Seall and Miss Adams Are Appointed Grade Instructors

BEGIN ON SEPT. 11

Slash Amounts to About 10 Per Cent

Several announcements of importance were made, Thursday, by Charles H. May, president of the board of education.

They are:

1. City schools will open on Sept. 11, the second Monday in the month, for a 36-week year. A two-weeks' Christmas vacation is planned.

2. Two grade school teachers have been employed to fill vacancies caused by resignation of Miss Adah Burgett, who last week became Mrs. Harold Costlow, and Miss Margaret Rooney. The new teachers, as yet unassigned by Supt. E. L. Daley, are Miss Mary Seall and Miss Geneva Adams.

3. A reduction of about $6,000 in teachers' salaries, amounting to almost 10 per cent has been made in contracts put in the mail Wednesday or Thursday by Clerk J. R. Noecker.

4. Harry Kraft has been re-employed as attendance officer and enumerator.

SAVING IN FUEL

The two weeks' vacation at Christmas time is the result of a system worked out by the board of education wherin more money is saved by the longer vacation at that time than by one week then and a week later in the year. A saving is made in the fuel and light bills of the school, it is pointed out. The 36-week year was adopted two years ago, a reduction of two weeks from the former schedule.

Miss Seall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Seall, E. Franklin-st, is a graduate of the local high school and of Otterbein college, Westerville.

Miss Adams, a daughter of David E. Adams, Washington-twp, and a niece of A. A. White, former local teacher, has had eight years experience as a teacher having been employed last year at Stoutsville. She graduated from the local high school and took a 3-year course at Wittenberg college, Springfield.

Miss Adams' brother, William E. Adams, was recently employed as principal of the Monroe-twp school, succeeding Harold Costlow who resigned to accept a similar position at the Perry-twp school.

STUDY ASSIGNMENTS

The grade and high school setups are now complete with all vacancies being filled. Mr. Daley is now working on his assignment list which he will make public when completed.

The reduction in salaries was found necessary after a close scrutiny of the financial situation by the board of education. A saving was made when three positions, those of superintendent of schools, supervisor of grades and high school principal, were consolidated into two and but for this a greater reduction would have been necessary in teachers' salaries.

WILMINGTON, Aug. 10.—Clinton-co schools will not open before Sept. 11, and "perhaps not then," Carl H. Shanks, superintendent of schools, announced today.

The opening date depends upon what action is taken at the special session of the state legislature, starting Aug. 16, he said.

29 ARE KILLED

BELGRADE, Aug. 10.—Twenty-nine persons, including eleven children, lost their lives in two disasters in widely-separated parts of Jugoslavia today.

Fourteen were killed at Kovin in the explosion of a threshing machine, while 15 were drowned when two boats collided and sank in the Una river near Kostajnica.

HUNGRY, EATS PIE

Somebody was hungry for pie Wednesday but instead of visiting one of the local bakeries the person preferred to get his pie at the Palm restaurant, E. Main-st.

Carl Palm, proprietor, reported to police Thursday that someone entered the place after midnight Wednesday by breaking a rear window. The culprit ate part of a pie, leaving the remainder on the counter. Mr. Palm could find nothing else missing.

DOG IS FOUND

Harold Sharp, 117 N. Scioto-st, reported to police Thursday that he found a black and white dog at his home. The owner may recover the dog by going to Mr. Sharp's home.

Countian Disrobed, Tied To Tree By 3 Strangers

Hoyt Tharp, 24, of Williamsport, Thursday, was recounting his experiences at the hands of three hold-up men who picked him up on Routes 50 and 11, near Chillicothe, Tuesday, as he was "thumbing" from his home to Gallipolis, took him to a desolated spot and stripped him of all his clothing except his shoes, using his undershirt and necktie to tie him to a tree.

Tharp is said to have been the fourth victim of the same gang, three other similar reports having been recorded at Independence and Winchester, Ky., Monday.

According to his own story, Tharp was walking and "thumbing" his way from his home to Gallipolis, carrying a suitcase, when the car stopped beside him at Routes 50 and 11, near the Chillicothe corporation line, Tuesday afternoon.

FACED REVOLVER

Suspicious of the looks of the three men in the 1929 DeSoto sedan Tharp hesitated and then started to back away. One of the men covered him with a gun and ordered him to get in the car. The De Soto had Indiana license plates, Tharp said.

They drove on Route 11 to near the Walnut creek bridge where they turned in a lane to the left of the highway and waded across the creek with Tharp. After asking him if he had anything to say before they 'bumped him off,' the three men forced him to strip off all his clothing except his shoes and then used his undershirt and necktie to tie him to a small tree with his hands behind him.

Taking his clothing, which contained $17 in cash, and his suitcase

SINCLAIRS OUTSLUG BULLDOGS, 22 TO 15

Both Teams Drive Ball To All Corners of Lot In Hitting Bee.

Forty-one base hits, and most of them clean ones, with four triples and three doubles mixed in accounted for 37 runs Wednesday evening and the Sinclair Oils tightened their grasp on first place in the recreation ball league by defeating the Clark Bulldogs, 22-15.

Probably never before in local recreation ball history have so many hard hits been recorded. Neither Vlerebome nor Hegele could get the ball past the batters. Everything that was dished up to the plate was greeted with a blow to some outer garden.

Full nine innings were completed although it was too dark in the last two frames to play good ball. But who cared, the pitchers went to tossing them in and the batters continued to drive them out.

FIVE IN FIRST

Good hitting by the Sinclairs in the early innings combined with mighty poor judgment by the Bulldogs gave Troy White's team a lead that it never relinquished. Howard White and Pickens singled and when Barnes grounded to Dumm everyone was safe when the throw went to the plate too late to get White. A walk and two errors helped account for a total of five in the inning.

The Bulldogs came back with three, Art Walker's single driving Bunk Radcliff over and Don White's muff of a pop fly allowing the other two to score.

The Oils smashed for more runs over the plate in the second and obtained two in the third. They were blanked in the fourth but scored two in the fifth and one in the sixth before they turned on the heat to score six in the seventh. The first five men in the inning hit safely, Wefler the fifth batter driving a triple to left field with two mates on the runways. A walk and an error accounted for another counter. The Oils ended their scoring in the eighth with two runs.

BULLDOGS RALLY

While the Sinclairs were doing all their scoring the Bulldogs were not idle at the plate. They scored one in each the third and fourth then smashed out five in the sixth, a double by Karl Radcliff and a triple by Merle Davis being the big blows. Three more were scored in the seventh and two scored in the ninth.

Howard White and Bob Pickens with five and four hits, respectively, led the Oil sluggers while Art Walker counted four hits for the losers.

Cuzz Dumm, oil second sacker, was charged with four errors but had more difficult chances than any fielder to play this year. He had four putouts and seven assists besides the erorrs.

Russ Miller and Bill Pickens were the umpires.

This evening the Circleville Oils and Panthers are scheduled.

GOLFERS DROP HOT CONTEST

Washington C. H. Gleans 18-15 Edge; Number of Local Stars Don't Play.

With a number of the local club's good golfers failing to make an appearance, Pickaway Country club golfers lost to Washington C. H. in a nevertheless interesting match, Wednesday, 18 to 15.

The match was played on the local course.

Good golf was turned in by a number of the participants with the 76 score of Willard McLean, Washington C. H. caddy master, topping the field. Graham, Washington pro, who played Jim Evans when Frank Casey, local professional, was unable to play because of illness, carded a 78. No local player broke 80 although Evans in losing two points hit that mark.

In order to give the Washington C. H. outfit a match a member of the visiting team was matched against one of his teammates.

The players and their scores were:

Columbus Boosts Lead Over Minneapolis To 14 Games; Play Tonight.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 10—The Columbus Red Birds today held a 14-game edge in the American Association pennant race after initiating a series here with the Minneapolis Millers by two imposing victories yesterday.

Clarence Heise pitched the Birds to a 10 to 2 win the first game of the double header over the Millers, association champions, and Bud Teachout blanked the visitors 9 to 0 in the second game.

The two teams were scheduled to meet in a night game tonight following a fireworks display, athletic program, and ceremony in honor of Nick Cullop, popular holder of the circuit home record. Thomas J. Hickey, president of the association, was expected to be present.

HOW TO OBTAIN BLUE EAGLE EXPLAINED BY NRA DIRECTOR

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 10.—Thousands of telegrams from employers requesting specific information as to just what steps must be taken in order to receive the Blue Eagle, are still pouring into National Recovery Administration headquarters here.

In order that these queries may be answered clearly and concisely, Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, Executive Director of the President's Re-employment Program, today laid down the exact procedure, in a statement to the press. Gen. Hammond will also broadcast the procedure over an NBC hookup tonight at 9 p. m. E. S. T. The statement follows:

To all employers who are not working under codes approved by the President and who ask: "How do I obtain the Blue Eagle?" the answer is, there are three methods which may be pursued.

1. Sign the President's Re-employment Agreement as is — without change or modification. Mail it to the District Office of the Department of Commerce. Put its provisions into operation. Sign the Certificate of Compliance. Hand it to your local post master, who will post your name on the Honor Roll and hand you your Blue Eagle.

2. If your line of business has submitted a code and the NRA has temporarily approved hours and wages to be in effect until the code itself is approved by the President, do this:

Sign the President's Re-employment Agreement. Mail it to the District Office of the Department of Commerce. Comply with its provisions as far as possible. Now, if a specific code has been submitted by your industry and its wage and hour provisions accepted by a NRA Deputy Administrator, sign the Certificate of Compliance with this endorsement: "To the extent of NRA consent as announced, we have complied with the President's Agreement by conforming with the substituted provisions of the code submitted for the (blank) trade or industry." Hand this to your local post master, who will post your name on the Honor Roll and hand you the NRA Blue Eagle.

3. If neither 1 nor 2 applies and you feel you have to file a petition for relief, do this:

Sign the President's Re-employment Agreement, mail it to the District Office of the Department of Commerce. If you find you cannot comply with most of its provisions, than prepare a petition to the NRA asking for a stay or postponement of those provisions which would produce an "unavoidable hardship." Submit this petition to a trade association of your industry, or, if none, to your local Chamber of Commerce, or such other organization as can properly vouch for the facts. If officially accepted by one of the above, add the following to the face of your certificate:

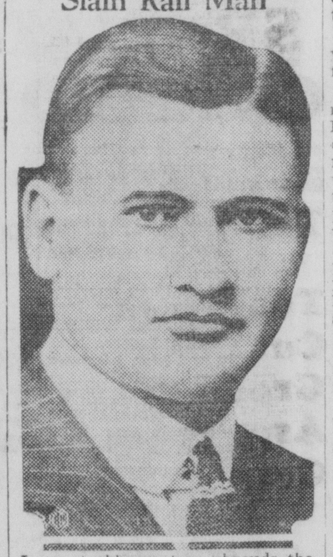

"Except for those interem provisions regarding wages and hours which have been approved by the (blank) association or organization."

Then the post master will authorize you to use the NRA Blue Eagle. This last procedure may take some time and is, of course, subject to reversal when your petition is reviewed by the NRA.

Not Much Choice

By IRVIN S. COBB

DURING the war, a young colored soldier was in training at Camp Sherman. He received a very affectionate letter from his girl in Dayton, urging him to visit her. Applying to his captain for a furlough, he was promptly refused. A few days later he received a similar appeal. Applying again he got another turndown. By the next mail, he received the third letter which read, in effect, "Looka here honey, I aint gwine write you no more. You all better come right on down to Dayton, and right now."

Realizing the seriousness of the situation, he applied once more for a pass, but luck was against him. So when darkness covered the camp, he slipped down to the gate with the idea of showing his contempt for army regulations. Naturally the guard halted him, asking him where he was going.

He replied, "I'm gwine to Dayton."

"Let's see your pass."

"I aint got no pass."

"Well, you all knows you caint git past me 'thout no pass."

This was the last straw, so the baffled Romeo exclaimed, "Looka here, black boy! I'se got a mother in Heaven, a father in Hell an' a girl in Dayton, and I'm gwine to see one of dem three dis night."

Don't Neglect Abrasions Of Skin, Authority Warns

By ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

THERE ARE many afflictions of the skin, but few are as disturbing and alarming as erysipelas. Fortunately in these days this disease is not encountered frequently. It was very common when little was known about infection and antiseptics. In those times, hospitals, especially maternity wards, were the scenes of severe and serious epidemics of erysipelas.

Dr. Copeland

The disease was spoken of as "St. Anthony's Fire" and it was regarded as highly contagious. Today it is not counted as one of the contagious diseases. The old name is seldom used. It is now known as an infectious disease, caused by a germ called the "streptococcus erysipelatis".

Serious Complications May Follow

The germ enters the body through an abrasion, a wound, any scratch or break of the skin. Trouble is not suspected until the victim notices a masked itching and burning of the injured skin. Then there follows sudden fever, with chill and marked redness of the skin.

The eruption begins about the second day after the infection and may spread all over the body. It is more likely to be localized. In mild cases the eruption disappears about the fourth day and signs of improvement begin within a week. Unfortunately, not all cases of erysipelas are of a mild nature. Complications, such as gangrene and other serious disturbances may develop. By proper care serious complications can be prevented.

Don't Neglect Simple Injuries

Never neglect an abrasion of the skin. No matter how slight the injury appears to you, always apply an antiseptic. If throbbing and redness are present consult with your doctor. Do not forget that simple injuries of the fingers, hands or feet may lead to serious disorders.

Fever, headache and intestinal disturbances are warning signs that the infection has spread beneath the skin. They are due to the absorption of poisons from the infected wound. Careful nursing and medical care are essential if undesirable complications are to be prevented.

As I said, this dreaded disease is less frequently seen today. We are fortunate enough to live in a different age. We have at our disposal adequate measures for combatting infection and disease. In addition, this particular disease can be controlled by the administration of a special preparation called "erysipelas antitoxin".

OHIO EMPLOYMENT SHOWS GREAT JUMP

COLUMBUS, Aug. 10.—Ohio employment increased 30 per cent from March 1 to Aug. 1, the day that the NRA campaign was launched, and brought jobs to approximately 125,000 Ohio workers, the Ohio State university bureau of business research said today in a public estimate.

"Thousands of other Ohioans," the bureau said, have returned to employment since that time as a result of President Roosevelt's recovery program.

In addition to this substantial gain in new workers, a large number of part-time employes have been returned to more normal working days, according to George A. Jones, of the bureau's research staff. This number, he said, is not capable of measurement.

Ohio's employment index for July, according to Jones, stood at 78 as compared with 100 for the average month in 1926, usually accepted as a normal business year.

The March-to-July improvement "equals about one-half the improvement required to establish the employment index at the 1926 level," it was estimated.

Chief increases in employment were made in the metal products group, including such industries as steel works and rolling mills, foundries, and sheet metal works. The employment gain in this group was 57 per cent since March.

The vehicles group reported a gain of 48 per cent.

Other manufacturing groups had gains as followers during the past four months:

Machinery, 40 per cent; stone, clay and glass, 38 per cent; rubber products, 36 per cent.

The lumber products industry, which had the smallest gain, recorded an increase of 27 per cent on the basis of the bureau's figures.

Textiles, chemicals, foods, paper and printing and miscellaneous manufacturing groups have not recorded such impressive gains since March because their employment since 1929 has been more stable than other groups, Jones said.

ing the lunch period without pay, or either directly or indirectly conspire to defeat the very purpose of the agreement by materially shortening the number of hours which a store ordinarily stayed open.

Developments were:

1. Johnson delivered an ultimatum to retail stores to observe the presidential agreement recently concluded by their respective retail associations not to shorten hours so as to avoid employing extra help or to surrender their Blue Eagle insignia.

2. The government sought a short cut in the oil controversy by offering a modified code covering only hours and wages, which have been unanimously approved, so that companies desiring to do so could sign this modified agreement, without waiting for settlement of the major issues.

3. Hearings were launched on a quartet of widely varied codes, involving hours and wages of thousands of workers throughout the United States. These include the codes of the theatrical world, exclusive of the motion picture industry; the hosiery industry, knitting machinery, and underwear manufacturers, with affiliated groups.

Johnson's warning to retail stores followed reports of widespread attempts to evade the main provisions in agreements concluded by retail organizations of virtually all branches of enterprise.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 10.— Liquor law enforcement in Ohio today was left in the hands of the state prohibition department, operating with the smallest force in its history.

Manned by only ten inspectors, the state department courageously assumed the full enforcement responsibility under the leadership of State Prohibition Commissioner E. C. Mathews following the closing of federal dry offices yesterday at Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati.

"Our department will continue as usual," Mathews declared today.

Closing of the federal dry offices in Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati removed, at least temporarily, approximately 20 federal prohibition inspectors — feared among bootleggers as "the feds—from their duties of enforcing the National Prohibition Act in Ohio.

An Effective Dinner Table Laid With Simple Wares

This table set with pewter, red and white linen, and a noticeable absence of fussy detail, is described below.

Pewter and Other Simple Wares Vogue for Tables

The Setting Must Be Distinguished By Originality Rather Than High Cost, Is the New Rule With the Clever Host or Hostess.

THE table above was designed for a man's dinner, but because its cloth and napkins are very simple, the beer mugs and water goblets of pewter instead of silver, and the whole scheme very modest, it does not necessarily hold that a woman's luncheon or dinner could not be effective following the same rules of decoration and arrangement.

We can all recognize the red and white tablecloths of our mother's day in those cleverly fringed napkins shown on the table above; they are of linen, in an old damask pattern, and of course they match the table cloth. This is white with two borders of red and white, and a very wide fringed edge which does not show in the picture.

Pewter Always Effective

On such a cloth the wares should naturally follow in the same degree of simplicity and informality. So in place of fine silver, some equally distinguished new pewter is used; tall, graceful, stemmed goblets for water, and The fruit bowl in the center is of good mugs for ale, beer or cider. plain pewter, the salt and pepper shakers with their amusing handles, the candlesticks and the water pitcher shown at the right end of the table, are also of the same grade of pewter.

The large service plates are white with red and blue borders, and their interesting shape is worth noting as something a little different from the usual service or cover plate.

Note also that there is a refreshingly simple outlay of silver; just the soup spoon and knife and fork; salad will be served with the dinner, and therefore a second fork is not called for, and the dessert spoon and fork will be brought in with that course. Men like such a table; there is nothing fragile or "fussy" on it; and children like it, and women who have simple tastes prefer this sort of arrangement to the usual showing of delicate linen and fine crystal, for any but the most formal of guest occasions.

You can't tell by the size of a car how much the occupants will steal out of a corn or tater patch.

It's no wonder gangsters are depraved, when you observe the kind of public officials they must do business with.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THERE was a guy on trial for murder, and he didn't take any interest in the case at all. He wouldn't even hire a lawyer, but the law in that state wouldn't let the poor guy be convicted so easy, so the court named a young lawyer for him.

The lawyer couldn't get any satisfaction out of the client.

"I killed him," says the bloke "So of course I got to get hanged, ain't I? That's all there is to it."

The young lawyer come into court and had himself sworn as the only witness.

"The client is crazy," he tells the court. "We won't need no doctors to prove it. He says he killed the other fellow and wants to plead guilty and he reckons a man has to hang for murder. And besides that, he refuses to plead insanity! That's all of our case, your honor. I think I've proved he's crazy."

And the jury got right up and stopped the trial. "Not guilty, but crazy!" says the jury.

Building Up the Navy

THAT plans for the building up of the United States navy have progressed to the point where bids for the construction of 21 vessels have been opened by the department should be a matter of satisfaction to the entire country.

There are two important reasons for this. One is that it will give the country a navy more adequate for defending this country's interests and commanding the respect of other nations. The other reason lies in the stimulation of industry which the construction program will provide.

Secretary Swanson predicted that the actual work would be under way within 60 days. The program will cost $100,000,000, the money coming from the public recovery act funds, and will cover three years. Included in the vessels to be constructed will be two aircraft carriers of 20,000 tons each; one heavy cruiser armed with eight-inch guns; one light cruiser armed with six-inch guns; eight destroyers of 1,850 tons each; seven destroyers of 1,500 tons each, and two submarines of 1,400 tons each.

The three-year program represents the greatest ship construction project in the history of the country. It represents a movement to build the navy up to the strength permitted under the London treaty. Completion of the program will leave the United States still about 204,000 tons under the treaty limits and farther away from the latter than will be either Great Britain or Japan when these two nations complete their present building programs.

It is easy to see, therefore, that America is not bent on unduly increasing the strength of its navy. Its action can not be thus interpreted in the light of facts.

Steel and various other industries will benefit from the program and employment will be greatly increased in consequence.

Health of the Young

WHILE it is disturbing to learn that the health of a fifth of the children in the United States is below par due to depression conditions, there is really more reason for satisfaction than for alarm in the nation's health record since 1929.

It is almost a miracle that more children are not below par since undernourishment and malnutrition are quite common among children even in prosperous times and much more than a fifth of the juvenile population has been affected by the general unemployment. The depression is not responsible for the entire 20 per cent.

This condition has not been followed by an increase in the death rate or in a spread of disease, so it would appear that the children below par are not far below normal. Diphtheria and tuberculosis, two diseases especially dreaded among children during periods of famine, have made fewer inroads on child life than before and the death rate among children has been slowly declining. Last year the general death rate was the lowest in history and this year it is only 3.3 per cent higher than that record low.

Thus it comes to pass that another of society's greatest depression fears was unfounded. For four years the country has lived in dread of the mark the depression with its scarcity of food, fuel and clothing and lack of medical attention would leave on the youth of today. Thanks to the generosity of the more fortunate and to the providence of the government that mark will be almost imperceptible.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

Joan Hastings, seventeen and beautiful, lives a secluded life with her two old maiden aunts in a house long run to seed. Aunt Evvie, discovering that Joan has visited a dance hall, angrily tells Joan she is just like her mother and threatens to reveal the skeleton in the family closet.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER 2

Evvie leaned forward, her heavy black brows drawn together. "Tell you! Yes, I'll tell you. It's high time you took warning. You're your mother's daughter. You're Veronica Van Fleet all over again. I can see it. You're beginning to act like her. She was boy crazy. She danced her way to the devil. I promised my mother on her deathbed I'd see you didn't go the same way, and I will—if I have to send you to a reform school to do it."

"What way—what did my mother do?"

"Oh, God in heaven!" moaned Babe. "Look down upon these thy—"

"Oh, shut up, Babe. Babe doesn't want me to say your mother stole Peter Hastings away from her, though why, after all this time—"

"Evvie—please—please—"

"Aunt Babe and my father—" Joan faltered.

"Engaged." Evvie snapped. She was enjoying it now. She was getting even with the dead Veronica at last; Veronica who was too beautiful; Veronica who had stolen Babe's beau, who had broken her father's heart and disgraced them all—been the cause of all the bad luck—wished Joan on them . . .

She took another look at the slender, panting girl in the shiny old blue serge. Slender and round as a willow branch. The same creamy skin. The same sea-green eyes.

"Look out you don't end like your mother!" she finished.

"But how? You haven't told me. You've got to now—"

"All right!" Evvie spread her broad palms. "You asked. Your mother was bad—that's what. She used to sneak out and meet Peter in the rose garden after she was told to go to bed. She was only sixteen. Papa found them there one night—seems like yesterday—Veronica with Babe's blue dressing gown with the white swansdown trimming over her nightgown, crying in the hall, and mama fainting—"

"But if they loved each other why didn't everybody let them be engaged?"

"She was too young!" Evvie came back from the past with a bang. Her thin nostrils quivered. "Papa sent her away to school, and made Peter ship on a sailing boat—the Hesperance. It was burnt in the China Sea . . . It was then that we learned Veronica had married Peter secretly. Anyway Peter was at the bottom of the China Sea, he and his ship, burnt to a crisp, and Veronica did just what you might have expected of her. She sent you home for us to take care of, and jumped off a ferry boat, coming over from the city. Well, that ought to hold you for a while. I guess I'll go to bed. You'd better come too, Babe!"

And she strode majestically from the room, quite herself again, leisurely impressive, all her anger forgotten.

Blump, blump—her heavy footsteps going up the stairs.

Then Joan's. Slow, heartbroken, her little world fallen about her ears. Up the stairs, into her room. How queer she looked in the mirror . . . her eyes looked so dark in her pale face . . . with her hair all mussed . . . Did "bad girls" look that way?

She knelt by the bed, and cooled her hot face on the flesh white counterpane. How she hated Aunt Evvie, and how she hated herself for believing Aunt Evvie.

The little porcelain miniature of Veronica—of Veronica at sixteen—was strained close to her heart. The little mother she had never known. Her pretty one. Her dear one.

"Aunt Evvie is a liar, a double-dyed, twenty-times, liar, I know she is!" she whispered to the little miniature, so oddly like herself. "I don't believe her—don't you know I don't—wherever you are?"

And she cried because it wasn't any use. Something in Evvie's cold dark eyes, something in Babe's pitiful clutching hands had told her. It wasn't a lie. It was the truth.

The breeze from the bay swept in coolly, lifting the long Swiss curtains, caressing her tear-stained cheek. It brought with it the tang of sea things, a hint of tar, a breath of some aromatic shrub from the garden. Then sweetly, overpoweringly fragrant, the smell of the wet, purple lilacs.

Joan sprang to her feet. "I don't care if it is true!" she cried. "It's a real love story—I'm proud I'm a Hastings! No wonder he loved her—she was beautiful and fine and wonderful! I love her too—more than ever—I do—I do—"

Again the little salty gust from the bay, the little whispering of the leaves in the rose garden under the window, the heavy scent of the lilacs. Romance rode on the breeze. Veronica, the little dead mother, was nearer than she had ever been, and dearer.

Joan reached out her arms. "I am like you!" The old mirror over the dresser flung back her image, starry-eyed, aflame with the first consciousness of her own beauty. "Why we look exactly alike! And I will be like you—they can't stop me from it! I will! I will!"

Joan sat at her bedroom window, trying to study. The dog-eared geometry was propped up before her, but the big French window overlooking the garden was before her, too. And the garden was full of fragrance. Little rustling noises in the budding rose trees down below. A big yellow and black butterfly on the very top of the tallest white rose bush. Blue jays scolding in the big pine tree near the hedge.

"The square of the hypotenuse—the square—"

The printed page blurred. It's so hard to put your mind on geometry when you've just lost your best friend. Hilda Sedgwick was mad at her—mad clear through.

"Why can't you walk up to the Point with me?" Hilda demanded hotly as they were coming from school.

"Aunt Evvie—"

"Oh, I know, you can't ever do anything that's any fun, but good night, Johnnie, don't you ever have to get botany specimens the same as I do at schocl, and won't she have to let you do that?"

"Yes, but—"

"Well, why can't we do it together?"

"I—I have mine already. I got them early — before school this morning—"

"Johnnie Hastings! And you never said a word to me! You passed right square by my house too!"

"It was awfully early."

"Oh, all right—if you don't want to go with me it's all right. You seem to have changed all of a sudden though."

"Hilda—I haven't. I do want to go—only—"

"Only what?" Hilda's dark eyes were snapping. Her broad shoulders in their white woolly sweater were thrown back, haughtily.

They were an odd pair: thick-set Hilda in her smart sport clothes, and tall, slender Joan in her shiny blue serge, made out of an old coat of Aunt Babe's, but they loved each other. They always had, in spite of Aunt Evvie's expressed objections, and Mrs. Sedgwick's amusement of the poverty-stricken, and fiercely snobbish Van Fleets.

And now their life-long friendship was breaking.

"Only Aunt Evvie wants me home right after school."

"I'm getting sick of excuses, Joan. You're always running away from us. Anne says you are, and Dorothy, too. Gee, I never would have believed it of you." Hilda winked back a big tear, and blew her nose angrily.

"Hilda—can't you see—it's because Aunt Evvie—"

"Of course, if you care more for her than you do about me, all right Johnnie Hastings. I'm through. I've always stuck up for you, against the whole crowd, but—"

And then, somehow or other, Hilda was running down the dusty road to catch up with Dorothy Nailor, and they had disappeared, arm in arm, round the bend that led up to the Point above the Bay. Joan was alone. All alone now. Because of Aunt Evvie. Because she went to visit a dancing class one single, solitary afternoon, and Aunt Evvie had found out . . .

Joan's mouth set in a hard, tight line. "The square of the hypotenuse—" She'd study hard, and graduate in winter instead of June. Get through six months earlier. Then she could earn her own living, and get away from Aunt Evvie and Aunt Babe, and the hateful house.

Aunt Babe was almost worse than Evvie now. Ever since Evvie told that story about Joan's father who was once Babe's sweetheart, Aunt Babe had been awful! She wouldn't speak to Joan at all. Just sat and rocked, and sniffled all the time. It was terrible to watch her, all huddled up in her big pink shawl, with her eyes all red, and her everlasting handkerchief dabbing at her little pinched blue nose.

Mrs. Heeley crept around with her head tied up in a piece of red flannel, on account of her neuralgia, always looking at Joan as if she expected her to go off at any minute, like a lighted firecracker; always muttering about "foolishness" and "boy-struck girls."

And then every night, Aunt Evvie with her arms akimbo would say, "I hate to have to question you this way, Joan, but you understand why it is necessary. I have my promise to your grandmother to keep. You're still under age—and if you defy me, there are those you can't. Have you cut off your friendship with the Sedgwicks, and that Nailor girl?"

Joan sighed, and went at the geometry again with a stubby pencil. "Oh, darn school. Darn living. Darn everything. When you have no friends, and no one in the whole world to love, it's no use—"

She slammed the book shut, and leaned out the window. It was such a gorgeous, springy day! To have to be cooped up in the house all alone, when everyone else is out having a good time! Hilda and Dorothy would be way up by the Power House on the hill now. They'd be getting wild flowers, Indian paint brushes and poppies. Talking about her, too, maybe. They didn't understand. She couldn't tell people all about Aunt Babe and Aunt Evvie and how queer they were. You have to stick up for your family a little, even if they are funny.

"I wish my mother had dropped me off the ferry boat, too. I don't blame her for getting drowned instead of coming home to this place when she found out father was dead. I guess she'd have taken me with her if she had known what it would be like for me. But she didn't know, poor little thing—"

Joan's large, gray-green eyes, with the thick, tawny lashes that were like Veronica's, grew tender, as they always did when she thought of her. Poor little dead mother! And her heart melted again, with love for Veronica.

(To Be Continued Tomorrow).

MOVIES

AT THE CLIFTONA

Cary Grant, Benita Hume, Jack LaRue, Glenda Farrell and Roscoe Karns play the leading roles in "Gambling Ship," a thrill-packed melodrama of life aboard a floating gambling palace, which comes to the Cliftona Theatre Friday and Saturday.

All the excitement, the hazard, and the suspense that rule events on board the nautical casinos, which float just beyond the reach of the law at the three-mile limit, are packed into the picture. It deals with a big-shot eastern gambling-ship operators when he goes to the West Coast for a vacation.

Grant, cast as the Easterner, at first refuses the offer made him to buy an interest in one of the ships. When the owner of the other, an old-time enemy, goes gunning for him, however, he changes his mind.

AT THE GRAND

"When Strangers Marry," the story of a dynamic engineer and his spirited wife who are thrown into the deadly heat of an oriental jungle, is at the Grand Theatre today. Jack Holt is starred in this Columbia picture with Lilian Bond, young English actress, portraying the role of his wife.

I've Often Wondered

By PAT J. KIRWIN

WHY that famous tire was called GOODYEAR?

The other day I asked the general manager of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Inc., makers of huge dirigibles, at Akron, to tell me about it. He was probably too busy, so he had an assistant, Mark L. Felber, perform the task, and the latter gentleman has done so in a creditable manner. He sends the following interesting explanation:

"Our company, as well as the tire, was named in honor of Charles Goodyear, who discovered vulcanization away back in 1839. Really, the manufacture of rubber goods began with the discovery of vulcanization by Mr. Goodyear. Indeed, it was made possible by that momentous discovery. The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., was founded just 35 years ago."

"Now, as to Charles Goodyear. He was born in New Haven, Conn., Dec. 29, 1800. He was apprenticed to a concern in Philadelphia in 1816 to learn the hardware business. At 21 he returned to Connecticut to enter the agricultural implement business with his father. In 1824 Mr. Goodyear and Miss Clarissa Beecher were married and two years later moved to Philadelphia to conduct a hardware store. In 1830, after his health became impaired, Mr. Goodyear's business failed and he was imprisoned for debts."

"After his release he read about 'gum elastic' and that a shoe company using rubber failed because its product stiffened in winter and melted in summer. He felt the urge to discover how the rubber should be treated. For a number of years Mr. Goodyear worked many tons of rubber with his hands, mixing it with various substances, at the same time working on several inventions as a means of support. He met with some success in his rubber activities by boiling the rubber with lime, and in 1835 was awarded medals at Mechanics' Fair. In 1837 he, with a partner, started the manufacture of rubber shoes, life preservers and other articles, but the firm failed in that year because of a panic."

"Finally, however, in 1839, while Mr. Goodyear was talking and demonstrating to some friends in his kitchen, a piece of rubber mixed with sulphur accidently fell on the stove. It charred like leather. Mr. Goodyear had discovered vulcanization. He followed up the discovery, still experimenting, and in 1851 went to Europe, where he exhibited specimens in the Great International Exhibition. Later, while in France, Mr. Goodyear was imprisoned for debts until 1855. He lived in England after that until May, 1858, when he sailed for the United States, where he died on July 1, 1860."

The MONTHS IN HISTORY

By M. McM. JONES

"The dusty thistle by the road
Scatters a silver spray:
The sun pours down his scorching beams
Upon the fainting day:
The blackberry vine bends with its weight
Of fruite down in the lane,
And adds its testimony too
That August's here gain."

August originally the sixth month was called Sextilies. As July had been named for the great Julius Caesar, the senate eager to please the Emperor Augustus named the month August. It was not his birth month but it was in this month that his greatest good fortune had happened to him. As July had thirty-one days and August only thirty, a day was added in order that Augustus might not be in any respect inferior to Julius.

August has given us two presidents, Benjamin Harrison and Herbert Hoover. The most important event in this month was Columbus beginning his first voyage.

It was on the first of August that the Emperor of Germany declared war on France—starting the conflagration which nearly destroyed modern civilization.

It was in August that Calvin Coolidge, vice president of the United States was sworn in as president. The ceremony took place in the little Vermont farm house. Warren Harding, president, died suddenly on his western trip and it was necessary to fill the office as soon as possible.

In 1587 the first English child was born in America.

We have August to thank for Oliver Wendall Homes, poet, author and Justice of Supreme Court of U. S. A.

In 1807 Fulton took a steamboat trip and in 1818 the first steamboat navigated Lake Erie.

In 1821 Missouri was admitted to the Union and in 1896 gold was discovered in the Klondike. In 1859 petrolium was discovered ruining the candle business.

In 1890 the first Food Inspection act was observed. Up to that date we had eaten what was set before us and never knew what hurt us. A lot of new friends and some enemies were introduced, vitamins, calories, who complicated our manner of living.

In 1858 first Atlantic Cable was completed, linking the old world with the new and changing international relations.

In 1843 the first practical typewriter was patented.

"Pill Boxes" Will Be Saved

Belgian authorities have put a stop to the demolition of all the German "pill boxes" in the Ypres salient. Some may be removed, but the most important ones are to be spared because they always afford great interest to visitors to the battlefields.

A woman's reason for liking a man's cigarette

Maybe you'll think I'm a bit inconsistent. Most things I'm fond of are really quite feminine . . . dainty, frilly frocks—delicate desserts—yes, and delicate compliments, too. To me my cigarette is a personal thing—it touches my lips—so give me one with real character. For some reason or other, I find that whenever I reach for a Lucky, always "Luckies Please". They're as mild and pure as can be—I wonder if "Toasting" isn't the reason after all!

Douglas Plans to Deduct Unpaid Loans From Farm Bounties

WASHINGTON — Budget Director Lewis Douglas, F. D. R.'s irrepressible super-economizer, is at it again.

This time it is the farmers he is after. In the next few months between $150,000,000 and $200,000,000 is due to be paid them by the government as bounties in return for cutting crop production. Douglas has it all figured out how the treasury can save a large part of this money.

As a result of devastation by floods and drought in recent years, the government has loaned millions of dollars for seed and feed. It is estimated that $130,000,000 of these debts still are unpaid, simply because farmers haven't had the money.

But now, with the government about to send them checks, Douglas proposes first to deduct what is owing the Treasury.

This ma[illegible] counting-house practice, but poor recovery economics. The whole purpose of the bounty plan is to put purchasing power in the empty hands of the farmers and the farm relief administrators are up in arms over the proposal. They warn that it is economic stupidity plus political dynamite.

Attorney General Cummings has been asked for a legal opinion, but it is a safe bet that the bounty payments will be made in full.

Used to Them

Last week the State Department made a genuine gesture to Haiti. It offered to take the Marines out by October. This was three years ahead of treaty schedule.

Paeons of praise and acclaim were expected.

But instead, the Haitians said: "No. We want the Marines to stay."

No explanation of this was given, but the State Department could guess the reasons: One, the Marines spend most of their pay checks in Haiti; two, President Vincent is worried about the security of his office and appreciates the steadying influence of Marine Corps proximity.

But despite this, the State Department has determined to take out the Marines about January 1.

Big Oaks

The old axiom that "big oaks out of little acorns grow" is too true regarding the origin of Roosevelt's spectacular appeal for a national moratorium on labor disputes.

It all started in Fayette-co, Pennsylvania, bloody battle-ground of fierce labor wars. Gunmen-guards of the H. C. Frick Coke Company, a subsidiary of the Morgan-controlled United States Steel Corporation, opened fire on unarmed miners, wounding nine, killing one.

The next day General Hugh Johnson flew up to Harrisburg to address Pennsylvania manufacturers about the NRA. Governor Pinchot met him, warned that the murderous attack was stirring miners to fever heat, that unless peace was restored a general tie-up of the entire soft coal region would result.

The fast-thinking, one-time cavalry commander did not have to be told twice what such a development would do to the President's recovery program.

Johnson figured that with American labor in its present high-spirited, hopeful state, a great demonstration was almost certain to spread like wild-fire. On the strictly industrial side Johnson, a genius in economic statistics, knew that soft coal reserves were at a low ebb; that a cessation of mining operations would cripple reviving manufacturing operations, hamstring the recovery effort.

So Johnson roared into action. Learning that Thomas Moses, President of the Frick Company, was enroute by plane to Harrisburg he waited for him at the airport. Moses balked at coming to Washington, said he had local appointments to keep.

"The hell with those engagements!" Johnson replied. "They can wait." Moses still objected.

IS IN COLUMBUS

Would Probably Resign Job As Clerk

Definite announcement by Thomas E. Dye of appointment of Ferd M. Pickens, clerk of courts, as chief counsel for the central Ohio district of the Federal Home Owners' Loan corporation was expected momentarily Thursday.

Mr. Dye is district manager of the office located in the Wyandotte building, Columbus.

The Herald received a report from Columbus, Thursday, that the appointment had already been made but when Mr. Pickens was reached on telephone in Mr. Dye's office he denied that he had actually been appointed but said he had been recommended by Congressman Mell G. Underwood and that he would know definitely tonight whether or not he would receive the post.

QUIT AS CLERK?

Appointment to the job, which is an important one and on which the salary has not yet been announced, will mean that Pickens will resign as clerk of courts. He is now on his second term as clerk. The chief counsel's job is a full-time one.

The position as Pickaway-co home loan attorney is still open, C. A. Leist, chairman of the Democratic executive committee, disclosed Thursday but it is expected to be filled in a short time.

Mr. Pickens is president of the Ohio Clerk of Courts association and is district deputy grand exalted ruler of the B. P. O. Elks lodge.

PITTMAN SEES ARMED ACTION

Senator Says United States Must Protect Own In Cuban Disorder.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Armed intervention in Cuba by United States battleships and marines was forecast today by Senator Key Pittman of Nevada, chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, unless President Roosevelt decides to ignore the Platt amendments.

Senator Pittman's statement was made on his arrival here aboard the liner Manhattan from London, where he was a delegate to the world economic conference.

The Senator asserted an immediate decision must be made and held that only two courses were open to the United States.

"The United States," he said, "will have to intervene if we carry out the policies laid down in the Platt amendment. Intervention by other governments will come if the amendment's policies are denounced."

The Platt amendment provides for protection of foreign citizens in Cuba, as well as Americans, by American troops if disorders make it necessary.

LOSES HIS JOB

MAJOR A. V. DALRYMPLE, who is jobless today following obsorption of the prohibition department by the federal department of justice.

Dalrymple was appointed chief of the prohibition department on recommendation of William Gibbs McAdoo of California, of which Dalrymple is a native.

Thirteen Years of Hectic Battle as Independent Unit Now Concluded; Office is Absorbed in Department of Justice Under Cummings; Dalrymple Automatically Loses Job.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Thirteen years of bloody and hectic enforcement of the prohibition law by a separate bureau of the government came to an end today.

The prohibition bureau expired.

Many felt that real enforcement of the Volstead act went by the board at the same time.

An executive order created the division of investigation of the department of justice. This division absorbed the prohibition, investigation and identification bureaus.

Thirteen hundred employes of the prohibition bureau were furloughed July 1, while a considerable additional number will be dropped within a few days. It was expected that not more than 2,000 of the total personnel of 4,000 would be retained. Half of those to remain in the justice department will be prohibition enforcement agents.

FORCE NEGLIGIBLE

Officials said that Attorney General Cummings would continue to direct his skeleton force of agents against the liquor traffic, but admitted that under the new lineup the government is powerless to cope with the illicit business. Even with the larger force the bootleggers plied a tremendous and profitable business. What they can do under the smaller force can be left to the imagination.

While the liberalization of the medicinal liquor regulations promised some relief to enforcement agents, the supply of legitimate whiskey is low and prices are increasing. At the same time bootleggers generally are cutting prices and getting all the business possible before repeal.

Assistant Attorney General William Stanley went to Connecticut to confer with Cummings, who is there on a vacation. It was understood the new prohibition set-up was put before Cummings for approval.

At the office of John S. Hurley, assistant head of the division of investigation, in charge of prohibition enforcement, it was stated that several days would elapse before the new organization would be perfected.

DALRYMPLE OUT

Hurley was assistant prohibition director. Major A. V. Dalrymple, director, is looking for another job. It was reported he wanted the post of director

JOHNSON HITS VIOLATION OF NRA POLICIES

Retailers Who Promised Not to Reduce Store Hours Are Cited

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Liberalized agreements authorized by Hugh S. Johnson, national recovery administrator, are speeding the drive to enroll every business and industry under a code. Today, at the same time, the entire business world had before it a stern warning not to violate these easy agreements.

Formation of a policy board to recommend easements in the terms of the President's blanket code, so that firms might readily adapt their operations to conform to its aims, has drawn in numerous additional concerns.

It has become apparent that the administrator is subordinating proceedings on permanent codes in favor of speedier and less complicated modified agreements permitted under the President's blanket appeal.

Warning that retailers' organizations had promised not to curtail store hours below 52 per week, or in case a store already operated on a shorter schedule, not to reduce its hours at all, Johnson pointed out that the whole aim of the agreement was to spread employment, and assure a reasonable wage.

NEED WORKERS

"There can be no misunderstanding about that," he said. "It is evident that the longer a store remains open and the shorter number of hours every employee works, the greater will be the number of workers needed."

He cited clauses in the agreement promising "not to use any subterfuge to frustrate the spirit and intent of the agreement.

"No one signing such an agreement could conceivably set about staggering employee hours, enforcing rest periods and increas-

FIRE STRIKES HEFFNER MILL

Loss of $500 Reported By Harry Heffner; Williamsport Firemen Aid.

Quick work of the Williamsport fire department helped avert probable ruin for the Heffner Grain Co., Williamsport, about 4:30 p. m. Wednesday, when a fire started in a supply of charcoal in the north warehouse adjoining the elevator, inflicting about $500 damage.

The fire department hurried to the elevator and quickly put out the flames. The black dust emanating from the broken charcoal sacks hampered the firemen in extinguishing the blaze. Boards were pried off from the inside of the building in order to get the hose on the flames.

Harry Heffner, this city, and workmen at the elevator reported that they detected smoke as early as 2 p. m. and made several inspections of the plant but were unable to locate any fire. The blaze was discovered when smoke began to pour out along the eaves of the warehouse roof.

Spontaneous combustion was given as the cause of the fire. Many sacks of charcoal and feed were ruined. The loss is covered by insurance.

STRIKERS JAILED

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 10.—Fifty two milk strikers and their sympathizers were taken into custody by state troopers today in an outbreak at Deruyter, about 40 miles southwest of here, where non-strikers were delivering milk to a plant.

Several hundred strikers had assembled near the plant when four trucks, loaded with milk, came up the highway. The trucks were halted and an attempt made to dump the milk.

State troopers were summoned. They waded into the crowd and a hand-to-hand battle ensued. A number of farmers and troopers were bruised in the fight but none seriously injured.

Miss Seall and Miss Adams Are Appointed Grade Instructors

BEGIN ON SEPT. 11

Slash Amounts to About 10 Per Cent

Several announcements of importance were made, Thursday, by Charles H. May, president of the board of education.

They are:

1. City schools will open on Sept. 11, the second Monday in the month, for a 36-week period. A two-weeks' Christmas vacation is planned.

2. Two grade school teachers have been employed to fill vacancies caused by resignation of Miss Adah Barnard, who last week became Mrs. Harold Costlow, and Miss Margaret Rooney. The new teachers, as yet unassigned by Supt. E. L. Daley, are Miss Mary Seall and Miss Geneva Adams.

3. A reduction of about $6,000 in teachers' salaries, amounting to almost 10 per cent has been made in contracts put in the mail Wednesday or Thursday by Clerk J. R. Noecker.

4. Harry Kraft has been employed as attendance officer and enumerator.

SAVING IN FUEL

The two weeks' vacation at Christmas time is the result of a system worked out by the board of education wherin more money is saved by the longer vacation at that time than by one week then and a week later in the year. The saving is made in the fuel and light bills of the school, it is pointed out. The 36-week year was adopted two years ago, a reduction of two weeks from the former period.

Miss Seall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Seall, E. Franklin-st, is a graduate of the local high school and of Otterbein college, Westerville.

Miss Adams, a daughter of David E. Adams, Washington-twp, and a niece of A. A. White, former local teacher, has had eight years experience as a teacher having been employed last year at Stoutsville. She graduated from the local high school and took a 3-year course at Wittenberg college, Springfield.

Miss Adams' brother, William E. Adams, was recently employed as principal of the Monroe-twp school, succeeding Harold Costlow who resigned to accept a similar position at the Perry-twp school.

STUDY ASSIGNMENTS

The grade and high school setups are now complete with all vacancies being filled. Mr. Daley is now working on his assignment list which he will make public when completed.

The reduction in salaries was found necessary after a close scrutiny of the financial situation by the board of education. A saving was made when three positions, those of superintendent of schools, supervisor of grades and high school principal, were consolidated into two and but for this a greater reduction would have been necessary in teachers' salaries.

WILMINGTON, Aug. 10.—Clinton-co schools will not open before Sept. 11, and "perhaps not then," Carl H. Shanks, superintendent of schools, announced today.

The opening date depends upon what action is taken at the special session of the state legislature, starting Aug. 16, he said.

29 ARE KILLED

BELGRADE, Aug. 10.—Twenty-nine persons, including eleven children, lost their lives in two disasters in widely-separated parts of Jugoslavia today.

Fourteen were killed at Kovin in the explosion of a threshing machine, while 15 were drowned when two boats collided and sank in the Una river near Kostajnica.

Countian Disrobed, Tied To Tree By 3 Strangers

Hoyt Tharp, 21, of Williamsport, Thursday, was recounting his experiences at the hands of three hold-up men who picked him up on Routes 50 and 11, near Chillicothe, Tuesday, as he was "thumbing" from his home to Gallipolis, took him to a desolated spot and stripped him of all his clothing except his shoes, using his undershirt and necktie to tie him to a tree.

Tharp is said to have been the fourth victim of the same gang, three other similar reports having been recorded at Independence and Winchester, Ky., Monday.

According to his own story, Tharp was walking and "thumbing" his way from his home to Gallipolis, carrying a suitcase, when the car stopped beside him at Routes 50 and 11, near the Chillicothe corporation line, Tuesday afternoon.

FACED REVOLVER

Suspicious of the looks of the three men in the 1929 DeSoto sedan Tharp hesitated and then started to back away. One of the men covered him with a gun and ordered him to get in the car. The DeSoto had Indiana license plates, Tharp said.

They drove on Route 11 to near the Walnut creek bridge where they turned in a lane to the left of the highway and waded across the creek with Tharp. After asking him if he had anything to say before they "bumped him off," the three men forced him to strip off all his clothing except his shoes and then used his undershirt and necktie to tie him to a small tree with his hands behind him.

Taking his clothing, which contained $17 in cash, and his suitcase

GOLFERS DROP HOT CONTEST

Washington C. H. Gleans 18-15 Edge; Number of Local Stars Don't Play.

With a number of the local club's good golfers failing to make an appearance, Pickaway Country club golfers lost to Washington C. H. in a nevertheless interesting match, Wednesday, 18 to 15.

The match was played on the local course.

Good golf was turned in by a number of the participants with the 76 score of Willard McLean, Washington C. H. caddy master, topping the field. Graham, Washington pro, who played Jim Evans when Frank Casey, local professional, was unable to play because of illness, carded a 78. No local player broke 80 although Evans in losing two points hit that mark.

In order to give the Washington C. H. outfit a match a member of the visiting team was matched against one of his teammates.

HOW TO OBTAIN BLUE EAGLE EXPLAINED BY NRA DIRECTOR

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 10.—Thousands of telegrams from employers requesting specific information as to just what steps must be taken in order to receive the Blue Eagle, are still pouring into National Recovery Administration headquarters here.

In order that these queries may be answered clearly and concisely, Gen. Thomas S. Hammond, Executive Director of the President's Re-employment Program, today laid down the exact procedure in a statement to the press. Gen. Hammond will also broadcast the procedure over an NBC hookup tonight at 9 p. m. E. S. T.

The statement follows:

To all employers who are not working under codes approved by the President and who ask: "How do I obtain the Blue Eagle?" the answer is, there are three methods which may be pursued.

1. Sign the President's Re-employment Agreement as is — without change or modification. Mail it to the District Office of the Department of Commerce. Put its provisions into operation. Sign the Certificate of Compliance. Hand it to your local post master, who will post your name on the Honor Roll and hand you your Blue Eagle.

2. If your line of business has submitted a code and the NRA has temporarily approved hours and wages to be in effect until the code itself is approved by the President, do this:

Sign the President's Re-employment Agreement. Mail it to the District Office of the Department of Commerce. Comply with its provisions as far as possible. Now, if a specific code has been submitted by your industry and its wage and hour provisions accepted by a NRA Deputy Administrator, sign the Certificate of Compliance with this endorsement: "To the extent of NRA consent as announced, we have complied with the President's Agreement by conforming with the substituted provisions of the code submitted for the (blank) trade or industry." Hand this to your local post master, who will post your name on the Honor Roll and hand you the NRA Blue Eagle.

3. If neither 1 nor 2 applies and you feel you have to file a petition for relief, do this:

Sign the President's Re-employment Agreement, mail it to the District Office of the Department of Commerce. If you find you cannot comply with most of its provisions, than prepare a petition to the NRA asking for a stay or postponement of those provisions which would produce an "unavoidable hardship." Submit this petition to a trade association of your industry, or, if none, to your local Chamber of Commerce, or such other organization as can properly vouch for the facts. If officially accepted by one of the above, add the following to the face of your certificate:

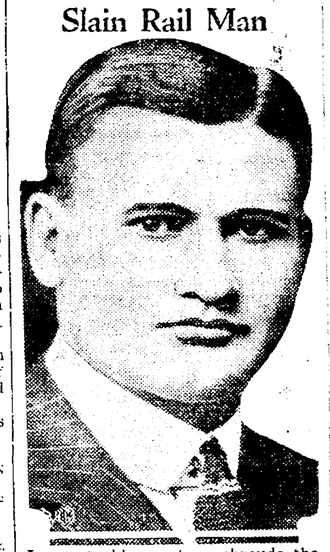

"Except for those interem provisions regarding wages and hours which have been approved by the (blank) association or organization."

Then the post master will authorize you to use the NRA Blue Eagle. This last procedure may take some time and is, of course, subject to reversal when your petition is reviewed by the NRA.

DURING the war, a young colored soldier was in training at Camp Sherman. He received a very affectionate letter from his girl in Dayton, urging him to visit her. Applying to his captain for a furlough, he was promptly refused. A few days later he received a similar appeal. Applying again he get another turndown. By the next mail, he received the third letter which read, in effect, "Looka here honey, I aint gwine write you no more. You all better come right on down to Dayton, and right now."

Realizing the seriousness of the situation, he applied once more for a pass, but luck was against him. So when darkness covered the camp, he slipped down to the gate with the idea of showing his contempt for army regulations. Naturally the guard halted him, asking him where he was going.

He replied, "I'm gwine to Dayton."

"Let's see your pass."

"I aint got no pass."

"Well, you all knows you caint git past me 'thout no pass."

This was the last straw, so the baffled Romeo exclaimed, "Looka here, black boy! I'se got a mother in Heaven, a father in Hell an' a girl in Dayton, and I'm gwine to see one of dem three dis night."

Don't Neglect Abrasions Of Skin, Authority Warns

ROYAL S. COPELAND, M. D.
United States senator from New York
Former Commissioner of Health, New York City

THERE ARE many afflictions of the skin, but few are as disturbing and alarming as erysipelas. Fortunately in these days this disease is not encountered frequently. It was very common when little was known about infection and antiseptics. In those times, hospitals, especially maternity wards, were the scenes of severe and serious epidemics of erysipelas.

Dr. Copeland

The disease was spoken of as "St. Anthony's Fire" and it was regarded as highly contagious. Today it is not counted as one of the contagious diseases. The old name is seldom used. It is now known as an infectious disease, caused by a germ called the "streptococcus erysipelatis".

Serious Complications May Follow

The germ enters the body through an abrasion, a wound, any scratch or break of the skin. Trouble is not suspected until the victim notices a marked itching and burning of the injured skin. Then there follows sudden fever, with chill and marked redness of the skin.

The eruption begins about the second day after the infection and may spread all over the body. It is more likely to be localized. In mild cases the eruption disappears about the fourth day and signs of improvement begin within a week. Unfortunately, not all cases of erysipelas are of a mild nature. Complications, such as gangrene and other serious disturbances may develop. By proper care serious complications can be prevented.

Don't Neglect Simple Injuries

Never neglect an abrasion of the skin. No matter how slight the injury appears to you, always apply an antiseptic. If throbbing and redness are present consult with your doctor. Do not forget that simple injuries of the fingers, hands or feet may lead to serious disorders.

Fever, headache and intestinal disturbances are warning signs that the infection has spread beneath the skin. They are due to the absorption of poisons from the infected wound. Careful nursing and medical care are essential if undesirable complications are to be prevented.

As I said, this dreaded disease is less frequently seen today. We are fortunate enough to live in a different age. We have at our disposal adequate measures for combatting infection and disease. In addition, this particular disease can be controlled by the administration of a special preparation called "erysipelas antitoxin".

OHIO EMPLOYMENT SHOWS GREAT JUMP

COLUMBUS, Aug. 10.—Ohio employment increased 30 per cent from March 1 to Aug. 1, the day that the NRA campaign was launched, and brought jobs to approximately 125,000 Ohio workers, the Ohio State university bureau of business research said today in a public estimate.

"Thousands of other Ohioans," the bureau said, have returned to employment since that time as a result of President Roosevelt's recovery program.

In addition to this substantial gain in new workers, a large number of part-time employes have been returned to more normal working days, according to George A. Jones, of the bureau's research staff. This number, he said, is not capable of measurement.

Ohio's employment index for July, according to Jones, stood at 78 as compared with 100 for the average month in 1926, usually accepted as a normal business year.

The March-to-July improvement "equals about one-half the improvement required to establish the employment index at the 1926 level" it was estimated.

Chief increases in employment were made in the metal products group, including such industries as steel works and rolling mills, foundries, and sheet metal works. The employment gain in this group was 57 per cent since March.

The vehicles group reported a gain of 48 per cent.

Other manufacturing groups had gains as followers during the past four months:

Machinery, 40 per cent; stone, clay and glass, 38 per cent; rubber products, 36 per cent.

The lumber products industry, which had the smallest gain, recorded an increase of 27 per cent on the basis of the bureau's figures.

Textiles, chemicals, foods, paper and printing and miscellaneous manufacturing groups have not recorded such impressive gains since March because their employment since 1929 has been more stable than other groups, Jones said.

ing the lunch period without pay, or either directly or indirectly conspire to defeat the very purpose of the agreement by materially shortening the number of hours which a store ordinarily stayed open.

Developments were:

1. Johnson delivered an ultimatum to retail stores to observe the presidential agreement recently concluded by their respective retail associations not to shorten hours so as to avoid employing extra help, or to surrender their Blue Eagle insignia.

2. The government sought a short cut in the oil controversy by offering a modified code covering only hours and wages, which have been unanimously approved, so that companies desiring to do so could sign this modified agreement, without waiting for settlement of the major issues.

3. Hearings were launched on a quartet of widely varied codes, involving hours and wages of thousands of workers throughout the United States. These include the codes of the theatrical world, exclusive of the motion picture industry; the hosiery industry, knitting machinery, and underwear manufacturers, with affiliated groups.

Johnson's warning to retail stores followed reports of widespread attempts to evade the main provisions in agreements concluded by retail organizations of virtually all branches of enterprise.

COLUMBUS, Aug. 10.— Liquor law enforcement in Ohio today was left in the hands of the state prohibition department, operating with the smallest force in its history.

BANK ROBBED

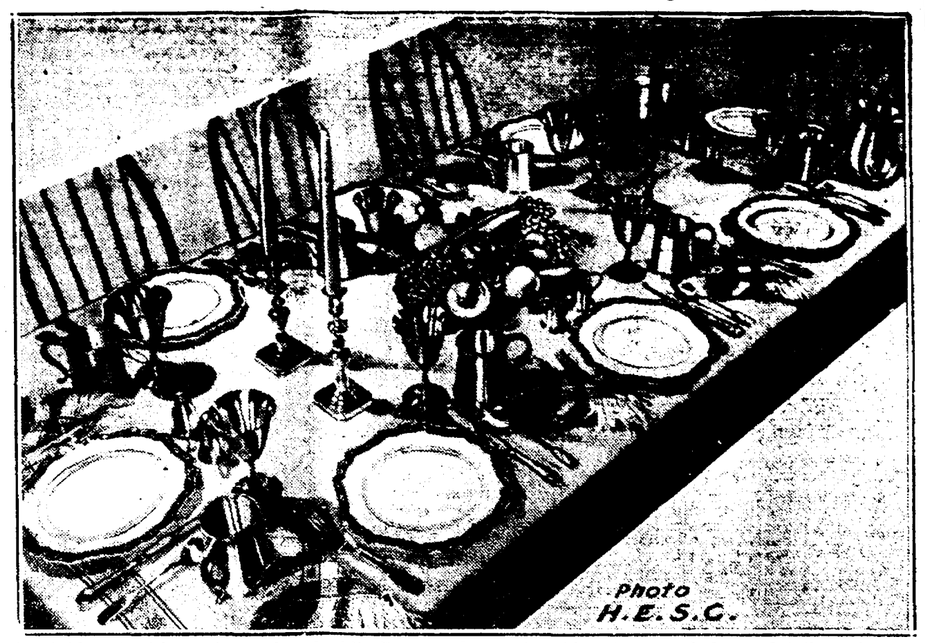

ELIDA, Aug. 10.—Search was extended into Indiana today for a well-dressed young bandit who held up the Farmers Bank here yesterday and escaped with $700 in cash.

The bandit staged the holdup with the aid of a sub-machine gun. He fled afterward toward the Indiana state line in an automobile which witnesses said carried Indiana license plates.

Bullfinch Can Do Damage

The bullfinch, a general favorite as a cage bird because of his sweet singing and his winning ways, is not so popular in the wild state in his native land. Few British birds are accused of doing more damage to the flower buds of fruit trees in winter and spring.

An Effective Dinner Table Laid With Simple Wares

This table set with pewter, red and white linen, and a noticeable absence of fussy detail, is described below.

Pewter and Other Simple Wares Vogue for Tables

The Setting Must Be Distinguished By Originality Rather Than High Cost, Is the New Rule With the Clever Host or Hostess.

THE table above was designed for a man's dinner, but because its cloth and napkins are very simple, the beer mugs and water goblets of pewter instead of silver, and the whole scheme very modest, it does not necessarily hold that a woman's luncheon or dinner could not be effective following the same rules of decoration and arrangement.

We can all recognize the red and white tablecloths of our mother's day in those cleverly fringed napkins shown on the table above; they are of linen, in an old damask pattern, and of course they match the table cloth. This is white with two borders of red and white, and a very wide fringed edge which does not show in the picture.

Pewter Always Effective

On such a cloth the wares should naturally follow in the same degree of simplicity and informality. So in place of fine silver, some equally distinguished new pewter is used; tall, graceful, stemmed goblets for water, and The fruit bowl in the center is of good mugs for ale, beer or cider. plain pewter, the salt and pepper shakers with their amusing handles, the candlesticks and the water pitcher shown at the right end of the table, are also of the same grade of pewter.

The large service plates are white with red and blue borders, and their interesting shape is worth noting as something a little different from the usual service or cover plate.

Note also that there is a refreshingly simple outlay of silver; just the soup spoon and knife and fork; salad will be served with the dinner, and therefore a second fork is not called for, and the dessert spoon and fork will be brought in with that course. Men like such a table; there is nothing fragile or "fussy" on it; and children like it, and women who have simple tastes prefer this sort of arrangement to the usual showing of delicate linen and fine crystal, for any but the most formal of guest occasions.

Will Rogers Picks A Story For This Spot

By WILL ROGERS

THERE was a guy on trial for murder, and he didn't take any interest in the case at all. He wouldn't even hire a lawyer, but the law in that state wouldn't let the poor guy be convicted so easy, so the court named a young lawyer for him.

The lawyer couldn't get any satisfaction out of the client.

"I killed him," says the bloke "So of course I got to get hanged, ain't I? That's all there is to it."

The young lawyer come into court and had himself sworn as the only witness.

"The client is crazy," he tells the court. "We won't need no doctors to prove it. He says he killed the other fellow and wants to plead guilty and he reckons a man has to hang for murder. And besides that, he refuses to plead insanity! That's all of our case, your honor. I think I've proved he's crazy."

And the jury got right up and stopped the trial. "Not guilty, but crazy!" says the jury.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

Joan Hastings, seventeen and beautiful, lives a secluded life with her two old maiden aunts in a house long run to seed. Aunt Evvie, discovering that Joan has visited a dance hall, angrily tells Joan she is just like her mother and threatens to reveal the skeleton in the family closet.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER 2

Evvie leaned forward, her heavy black brows drawn together. "Tell you! Yes, I'll tell you. It's high time you took warning. You're your mother's daughter. You're Veronica Van Fleet all over again. I can see it. You're beginning to act like her. She was boy crazy. She danced her way to the devil. I promised my mother on her deathbed I'd see you didn't go the same way, and I will—if I have to send you to a reform school to do it."

"What way—what did my mother do?"

"Oh, God in heaven!" moaned Babe. "Look down upon these thy—"

"Oh, shut up, Babe. Babe doesn't want me to say your mother stole Peter Hastings away from her, though why, after all this time—"

"Evvie—please—please—"

"Aunt Babe and my father—" Joan faltered.

"Engaged." Evvie snapped. She was enjoying it now. She was getting even with the dead Veronica at last; Veronica who was too beautiful; Veronica who had stolen Babe's beau, who had broken her father's heart and disgraced them all—been the cause of all the bad luck—wished Joan on them . . .

She took another look at the slender, panting girl in the shiny old blue serge. Slender and round as a willow branch. The same creamy skin. The same sea-green eyes.

"Look out you don't end like your mother!" she finished.

"But how? You haven't told me. You've got to now—"

"All right!" Evvie spread her broad palms. "You asked. Your mother was bad—that's what. She used to sneak out and meet Peter in the rose garden after she was told to go to bed. She was only sixteen. Papa found them there one night—seems like yesterday—Veronica with Babe's blue dressing gown with the white swansdown trimming over her nightgown, crying in the hall, and mama fainting—"

"But if they loved each other why didn't everybody let them be engaged?"

"She was too young!" Evvie came back from the past with a bang. Her thin nostrils quivered. "Papa sent her away to school, and made Peter ship on a sailing boat—the Hesperance. It was burnt in the China Sea . . . It was then that we learned Veronica had married Peter secretly. Anyway Peter was at the bottom of the China Sea, he and his ship, burnt to a crisp, and Veronica did just what you might have expected of her. She sent you home for us to take care of, and jumped off a ferry boat, coming over from the city. Well, that ought to hold you for a while. I guess I'll go to bed. You'd better come too, Babe!"

And she strode majestically from the room, quite herself again, leisurely impressive, all her anger forgotten.

Blump, blump—her heavy footsteps going up the stairs.

Then Joan's. Slow, heartbroken, her little world fallen about her ears. Up the stairs, into her room. How queer she looked in the mirror . . . her eyes looked so dark in her pale face . . . with her hair all mussed . . . Did "bad girls" look that way?

She knelt by the bed, and cooled her hot face on the flesh white counterpane. How she hated Aunt Evvie, and how she hated herself for believing Aunt Evvie.

The little porcelain miniature of Veronica—of Veronica at sixteen—was strained close to her heart. The little mother she had never known. Her pretty one. Her dear one.

"Aunt Evvie is a liar, a double-dyed, twenty-times, liar, I know she is!" she whispered to the little miniature, so oddly like herself. "I don't believe her—don't you know I don't—wherever you are?"

And she cried because it wasn't any use. Something in Evvie's cold dark eyes, something in Babe's pitiful clutching hands had told her. It wasn't a lie. It was the truth.

The breeze from the bay swept in coolly, lifting the long Swiss curtains, caressing her tear-stained cheek. It brought with it the tang of sea things, a hint of tar, a breath of some aromatic shrub from the garden. Then sweetly, overpoweringly fragrant, the smell of the wet, purple lilacs.

Joan sprang to her feet. "I don't care if it is true!" she cried. "It's a real love story—I'm proud I'm a Hastings! No wonder he loved her—she was beautiful and fine and wonderful! I love her too—more than ever—I do—I do—"

Again the little salty gust from the bay, the little whispering of the leaves in the rose garden under the window, the heavy scent of the lilacs. Romance rode on the breeze. Veronica, the little dead mother, was nearer than she had ever been, and dearer.

Joan roached out her arms. "I am like you!" The old mirror over the dresser flung back her image, starry-eyed, aflame with the first consciousness of her own beauty. "Why we look exactly alike! And I will be like you—they can't stop me from it! I will! I will!"

* * *

Joan sat at her bedroom window, trying to study. The dog-eared geometry was propped up before her, but the big French window overlooking the garden was before her, too. And the garden was full of fragrance. Little rustling noises in the budding rose trees down below. A big yellow and black butterfly on the very top of the tallest white rose bush. Blue jays scolding in the big pine tree near the hedge.

"The square of the hypotenuse—the square—"

The printed page blurred. It's so hard to put your mind on geometry when you've just lost your best friend. Hilda Sedgwick was mad at her—mad clear through.

"Why can't you walk up to the Point with me?" Hilda demanded hotly as they were coming from school.

"Aunt Evvie—"

"Oh, I know, you can't ever do anything that's any fun, but good night, Johnnie, don't you ever have to get botany specimens the same as I do at school, and won't she have to let you do that?"

"Yes, but—"

"Well, why can't we do it together?"

"I—I have mine already. I got them early—before school this morning—"

"Johnnie Hastings! And you never said a word to me! You passed right square by my house too!"

"It was awfully early."

"Oh, all right—if you don't want to go with me it's all right. You seem to have changed all of a sudden though."

"Hilda—I haven't. I do want to go—only—"

"Only what?" Hilda's dark eyes were snapping. Her broad shoulders in their white woolly sweater were thrown back, haughtily.

They were an odd pair: thick-set Hilda in her smart sport clothes, and tall, slender Joan in her shiny blue serge, made out of an old coat of Aunt Babe's, but they loved each other. They always had, in spite of Aunt Evvie's expressed objections, and Mrs. Sedgwick's amusement of the poverty-stricken, and fiercely snobbish Van Fleets.

And now their life-long friendship was breaking.

"Only Aunt Evvie wants me home right after school."

"I'm getting sick of excuses, Joan. You're always running away from us. Anne says you are, and Dorothy, too. Gee, I never would have believed it of you." Hilda winked back a big tear, and blew her nose angrily.

"Hilda—can't you see—it's because Aunt Evvie—"

"Of course, if you care more for her than you do about me, all right Johnnie Hastings. I'm through. I've always stuck up for you, against the whole crowd, but—"

And then, somehow or other, Hilda was running down the dusty road to catch up with Dorothy Nailor, and they had disappeared, arm in arm, round the bend that led up to the Point above the Bay. Joan was alone. All alone now. Because of Aunt Evvie. Because she went to visit a dancing class one single, solitary afternoon, and Aunt Evvie had found out . . .

Joan's mouth set in a hard, tight line. "The square of the hypotenuse—" She'd study hard, and graduate in winter instead of June. Get through six months earlier. Then she could earn her own living, and get away from Aunt Evvie and Aunt Babe, and the hateful house.

Aunt Babe was almost worse than Evvie now. Ever since Evvie told that story about Joan's father who was once Babe's sweetheart, Aunt Babe had been awful! She wouldn't speak to Joan at all. Just sat and rocked, and sniffled all the time. It was terrible to watch her, all huddled up in her big pink shawl, with her eyes all red, and her everlasting handkerchief dabbing at her little pinched blue nose.

Mrs. Heeley crept around with her head tied up in a piece of red flannel, on account of her neuralgia, always looking at Joan as if she expected her to go off at any minute, like a lighted firecracker; always muttering about "foolishness" and "boy-struck girls."

And then every night, Aunt Evvie with her arms akimbo would say, "I hate to have to question you this way, Joan, but you understand why it is necessary. I have my promise to your grandmother to keep. You're still under age—and if you defy me, there are those you can't. Have you cut off your friendship with the Sedgwicks, and that Nailor girl?"

Joan sighed, and went at the geometry again with a stubby pencil. "Oh, darn school. Darn living. Darn everything. When you have no friends, and no one in the whole world to love, it's no use—"

She slammed the book shut, and leaned out the window. It was such a gorgeous, springy day! To have to be cooped up in the house all alone, when everyone else is out having a good time! Hilda and Dorothy would be way up by the Power House on the hill now. They'd be getting wild flowers, Indian paint brushes and poppies. Talking about her, too, maybe. They didn't understand. She couldn't tell people all about Aunt Babe and Aunt Evvie and how queer they were. You have to stick up for your family a little, even if they are funny.

"I wish my mother had dropped me off the ferry boat, too. I don't blame her for getting drowned instead of coming home to this place when she found out father was dead. I guess she'd have taken me with her if she had known what it would be like for me. But she didn't know, poor little thing—"

It deals with a big-shot eastern gambling-ship operators when he goes to the West Coast for a vacation.

Grant, cast as the Easterner, at first refuses the offer made him to buy an interest in one of the ships. When the owner of the other, an old-time enemy, goes gunning for him, however, he changes his mind.

I've Often Wondered

By PAT J. KIRWIN

WHY that famous tire was called GOODYEAR?

The other day I asked the general manager of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., Inc., makers of huge dirigibles, at Akron, to tell me about it. He was probably too busy, so he had an assistant, Mark L. Felber, perform the task, and the latter gentleman has done so in a creditable manner. He sends the following interesting explanation:

* * *

"Our company, as well as the tire, was named in honor of Charles Goodyear, who discovered vulcanization away back in 1839. Really, the manufacture of rubber goods began with the discovery of vulcanization by Mr. Goodyear. Indeed, it was made possible by that momentous discovery. The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., was founded just 35 years ago."

* * *

"Now, as to Charles Goodyear. He was born in New Haven, Conn., Dec. 29, 1800. He was apprenticed to a concern in Philadelphia in 1816 to learn the hardware business. At 21 he returned to Connecticut to enter the agricultural implement business with his father. In 1824 Mr. Goodyear and Miss Clarissa Beecher were married and two years later moved to Philadelphia to conduct a hardware store. In 1830, after his health became impaired, Mr. Goodyear's business failed and he was imprisoned for debts."

"After his release he read about 'gum elastic' and that a shoe company using rubber failed because its product stiffened in winter and melted in summer. He felt the urge to discover how the rubber should be treated. For a number of years Mr. Goodyear worked many tons of rubber with his hands, mixing it with various substances, at the same time working on several inventions as a means of support. He met with some success in his rubber activities by boiling the rubber with lime, and in 1835 was awarded medals at Mechanics' Fair. In 1837 he, with a partner, started the manufacture of rubber shoes, life preservers and other articles, but the firm failed in that year because of a panic."

* * *

"Finally, however, in 1839, while Mr. Goodyear was talking and demonstrating to some friends in his kitchen, a piece of rubber mixed with sulphur accidently fell on the stove. It charred like leather. Mr. Goodyear had discovered vulcanization. He followed up the discovery, still experimenting, and in 1851 went to Europe, where he exhibited specimens in the Great International Exhibition. Later, while in France, Mr. Goodyear was imprisoned for debts until 1855. He lived in England after that until May, 1858, when he sailed for the United States, where he died on July 1, 1860."

The MONTHS IN HISTORY

By M. McM. JONES

"The dusty thistle by the road
Scatters a silver spray:
The sun pours down his scorching beams
Upon the fainting day:
The blackberry vine bends with its weight
Of fruite down in the lane,
And adds its testimony too
That August's here again."

August originally the sixth month was called Sextilies. As July had been named for the great Julius Caesar, the senate eager to please the Emperor Augustus named the month August. It was not his birth month but it was in this month that his greatest good fortune had happened to him. As July had thirty-one days and August only thirty, a day was added in order that Augustus might not be in any respect inferior to Julius.

August has given us two presidents, Benjamin Harrison and Herbert Hoover. The most important event in this month was Columbus beginning his first voyage.

It was on the first of August that the Emperor of Germany declared war on France starting the conflagration which nearly destroyed modern civilization.

It was in August that Calvin Coolidge, vice president of the United States was sworn in as president. The ceremony took place in the little Vermont farm house. Warren Harding, president, died suddenly on his western trip and it was necessary to fill the office as soon as possible.

In 1587 the first English child was born in America.

We have August to thank for Oliver Wendall Homes, poet, author and Justice of Supreme Court of U. S. A.

In 1807 Fulton took a steamboat trip and in 1818 the first steamboat navigated Lake Erie.

In 1821 Missouri was admitted to the Union and in 1896 gold was discovered in the Klondike. In 1859 petrolium was discovered ruining the candle business.

In 1890 the first Food Inspection act was observed. Up to that date we had eaten what was set before us and never knew what hurt us. A lot of new friends and some enemies were introduced, vitamins, calories, who complicated our manner of living.

In 1858 first Atlantic Cable was completed, linking the old world with the new and changing international relations.

In 1842 the first practical typewriter was patented.

"Pill Boxes" Will Be Saved

Belgian authorities have put a stop to the demolition of all the German "pill boxes" in the Ypres salient. Some may be removed, but the most important ones are to be spared because they always afford great interest to visitors to the battlefields.

A woman's reason for liking a man's cigarette

Maybe you'll think I'm a bit inconsistent. Most things I'm fond of are really quite feminine . . . dainty, frilly frocks—delicate desserts—yes, and delicate compliments, too. To me my cigarette is a personal thing—it touches my lips—so give me one with real character. For some reason or other, I find that whenever I reach for a Lucky, always "Luckies Please". They're as mild and pure as can be—I wonder if "Toasting" isn't the reason after all!
